OPA TO ENFORCE CEILING PRICES AT AUCTIONS

For sometime OPA ceiling prices on certain farm machinery sold at auctions have been evaded, but this week auctioneers received notices from the OPA that this practice must cease.

As an illustration of how the ceiling prices were evaded, a tractor on which the ceiling price was set at $910 was bid in for $1,000, but a cultivator was thrown in and the bid was raised to $1,600 for the two implements. This price was $400 above what the price was when the implements were purchased new.

Ceiling prices on used farm implements apply to tractors, hay balers, corn binders, corn pickers and combines. Horse drawn farm implements so far are exempt from ceiling prices.

Sister Kenny Demonstrates Her Treatment For "Polio"

Sister Elizabeth Kenny of Minneapolis, the Australian nurse, whose method of treatment adopted by many hospitals in the Chicago area, and which has relieved infantile paralysis victims, was a visitor in Chicago this week, in the closing Polio Fund drive campaign.

Altho the Kenny method was a matter of pronounced skepticism until three years ago, its amazing results since have won the endorsement of the American Medical profession. After a thirty-year struggle for recognition the Australian nurse came to this country in 1940 and thru funds provided by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis she was established at the University of Minnesota. Further study at the Minneapolis General and University of Minnesota Hospitals was made possible by the Foundation and has enabled scientists throughout the nation to carry on extensive research on the subject.

The Kenny method of treatment consists of the use of hot applications plus a highly specialized method of restoring weakened muscles to their normal use. It does away with splints and plaster casts. It is by no means a cure. It is, however, a tremendous step forward in the treatment of the disease, and in many cases eliminates painful and crippling after-effects.

New Lutheran Church At New Lenox Will Be Dedicated Sunday, January 31st

Dedication services at the Trinity Lutheran church, New Lenox are scheduled for Sunday, Jan. 31, at 10:30 a.m. and at 2:30 p.m. The Rev. W. J. Geffert of Mokena will preach in the morning service and perform the dedication ceremony at that time. In the afternoon service of Thanksgiving and Praise the Rev. B. H. Hemminger, Pastor of Mt. Olive Lutheran church in Chicago, and Regional Vice President of the English District, will be the guest speaker. The soloist, the Junior Choir and the Senior Choir of the church will sing in both services.

The congregation of Trinity Lutheran church was organized on Sept. 11, 1940 by the following charter members: Lester Brown, Geo. Webster, Leo White, Harold Triebel, Ernest Rydberg, Lucius Boynton, Fred Krog, Edw. Kersten, Ernest Gernenz. This decision to establish a Lutheran Church in New Lenox followed six months of preparatory work. Divine services were inaugurated on March 10, 1940 and from that day until Dec. 20, 1942 were conducted regularly in the public school auditorium. A Sunday School was established on March 31 under the leadership of the present superintendent, Mr. F. Krog. 15 children were grouped into 3 classes and instructed by Mrs. H. Triebel, Mrs. F. Krog and Mrs. W. Geffert. Since that time the enrollment has quadrupled and the following teachers have been added to the staff: Mrs. G. Webster, Mrs. E. Rydberg, Miss Bernadine Klausung and Mrs. Lavene Braun.

An active group of ladies organized early in 1941 today has a membership of 25. This group is under the chairmanship of Mrs. E. Rydberg.

Trinity congregation has enjoyed a steady growth since its inception and today numbers 130 souls, of which 64 are communicant members. Plans for a church were put into operation on May 30, 1942. The corner stone of the building was laid on June 28. According to the original plans a complete church edifice was to be erected. However, labor conditions and the shortage of critical materials necessitated a revision of such plans. The basement has now been completed and equipped as a temporary house of worship. Definite plans for the superstructure have been postponed until the return of normal times.

Officers of the congregation include: Elders and Trustees, F. Krog, A. Bruns, B. Studtmann, President, H. Triebel, Secretary, G. Webster, Treasurer, L. Boynton, Financial Secretary, W. Ruthenbeck. Lester Brown is chairman of the building committee. The architect is Chas. Hallmann of Chicago. The builder is G. Zimmerman of Chicago.

Income Tax CREDIT FOR DEPENDENTS

A taxpayer is entitled to a credit for each person other than husband or wife, whether related to him or not, and whether living with him or not, who during the taxable year was dependent upon and received his chief support from the taxpayer provided the dependent was either, a. under 18 years of age, or b. incapable of self support because mentally or physically defective.

The credit for dependents is based upon Actual Financial Dependency and not mere legal dependency. It is not necessary that the dependent be related to the taxpayer, but the taxpayer must have provided more than one half of the support or there is no dependency.

The term "mentally or physically defective" includes not only those who are mentally afflicted and physically crippled, but also persons who by reason of old age or impaired health, are incapable of self support. The state of mental or physical defect need not be of a permanent nature, but if it existed for only a portion of the year, then the credit for dependent can be claimed only for that portion of the year during which the dependent was supported by the taxpayer.

A person may not acquire a credit for dependent by reason of support of a person qualifying as a dependent if, as a result of such support, he acquires a head of family exemption, but may acquire a credit for dependent by reason of additional persons qualifying as dependents, whom he supports. Thus if a person claims head of family exemption on account of an aged mother or father, he would not be entitled to a credit for such dependent; but if he supported more than one such person he could claim credit for such additional persons provided they were under 18 years of age or incapable of self support.

Credit for dependents may not be divided between two persons filing separate returns, but must be taken by the one contributing the chief support. A credit for dependents may be claimed by a father who provides the support for his children living with his divorced wife, if the support is provided as a result of a court decree or as the result of an agreement between husband and wife.

The credit for dependent, allowable to a taxpayer filing on Form 1040, is $350, and is proportionate with the number of months of dependency. Thus for a child born on July 1, the credit allowable would be $175, for six months. And if a child became 18 years of age on July 1 the credit allowable would be $175. One half a month or less is not counted as a month, more than one half a month is counted as a month in calculating the credit.

A credit of $385 for each dependent on July 1 of the year is allowable to a taxpayer using Simplified Form 1040A.

Present System of Collecting Taxes Declared Obsolete

To The Editor:
BY FRED E. BUSBEY, M.C.
3rd District, Illinois

Due to the interest shown by people all over the United States in regard to some plan to put income taxes on a pay as you go basis, I am sending this short release which I believe will be informative and of news value to the general public.

It is generally realized by every one, and certainly by most Members of Congress, that the present system of collecting taxes is obsolete. It is a well accepted fact that millions of people will not have the money available on March 15th to make their tax payments.

Because of widespread interest in the Ruml plan, a concise, brief definition of this theory is:

"Individuals will pay tax during a given year on that year's income, determined tentatively by the preceding year's income, and subject to year end adjustment Taxes for 1942 are waived."

Regardless of what plan is enacted into law by the Congress, everyone will be required to file his income tax return for 1942 on or before March 15th. It cannot be predicted at this time what plan will finally be passed by Congress, therefore nothing definite can be said now as to whether the 1942 taxes will be waived, or whether they will be amortized over a period of years.

Congress is aware of this situation. The Ways and Means Committee of the House, where all tax legislation originates, have started hearings this week on various proposals, including H. J. Res. 17, containing the basic principles of the Ruml plan, which was offered in the House by Congressman Carlson of Kansas. A companion resolution was offered in the Senate by Senator Capper. The Committee will report this important piece of legislation at the very earliest possible date.

REVISE WARSHIP PLANS

Due in part to the fact that the U. S. navy had not had opportunity to profit from the experience of engaging in any major naval battles between 1812 and 1942, some of our biggest and fastest ships now under construction are being revised.

The main factor being changed in the blueprints is extra precaution against fire.

This is the lesson learned from the aircraft carriers Wasp and Lexington, and the cruiser Boise, all swept by fire after the direct damage of battle.

Since then the bureau of ships has made a study of fire hazards, finding that even an all-steel vessel can be swept by fire when tremendous heat is engendered, as from exploding shells and burning oil and gasoline.

New plans call for elimination of linoleum flooring, substitution of spun glass for cork in insulation, decrease in paint, and elimination of interior woodwork. Also, there will be larger fire hose and better fire fighting equipment generally.

Navy hopes to put an end to the grief of losing ships by fire after they have survived the battle.

Note: In the War of 1812, fire was a real hazard to wooden ships. But in the Civil war the only real engagement was between the Monitor and Merrimack which were not much bigger than modern escort vessels. In the Spanish-American war, there were no real naval battles and only one life was lost at Santiago, when an American sailor fell down a hatch on the Texas. In the World war, the U. S. navy got in too late to participate in any naval activities other than convoy work.

FDR'S SURPRISE

One thing that didn't get out about the "surprise" party at the White House for Speaker Sam Rayburn, on Sam's 61st birthday, was a little frill added by the President.

Rayburn was called to the White House with other congressional leaders ostensibly to discuss the legislative program for the new session. But when the group arrived, all but Rayburn were ushered into the private office of Economic Stabilizer Jimmy Byrnes.

The speaker was told that the President wished to see him alone for a few minutes.

The two men discussed legislative problems for a few minutes. Meantime, the President was keeping a sharp eye on the clock. Suddenly he broke out:

"Sam, the reason I asked you to come in here alone was to discuss a personal matter that has been worrying me."

Rayburn eyed him curiously, said nothing.

"It's about you, Sam," continued the President without batting an eyelash. "We're old friends and I feel I can talk to you frankly. I've got reports from Capitol Hill that the Democrats are dissatisfied with your leadership. They think you're getting too old to be speaker."

At that precise moment, Democratic Congressmen Cliff Woodrum of Virginia, Bob Ramspeck of Georgia, Republican Leader Joe Martin of Massachusetts, Rep. Jim Wadsworth of New York and other house members burst into the President's office, led by Jimmy Byrnes.

Together they began singing "Happy Birthday to You" at the top of their voices.

"That was perfect timing, fellows," beamed the President. He had planned it all very carefully himself.

JOE MARTIN VS. SAM RAYBURN

Privately Republican Leader Joe Martin never had any intention of letting the Republicans organize congress and elect him as speaker. Until 1944, this responsibility is the last thing he wants.

However, the canny Republican leader took keen delight in keeping the opposition guessing and carried on his little joke until the very last.

When he marched into Speaker Rayburn's office with the committee that was to escort Rayburn to the floor, following his re-election, Martin was grinning from ear to ear.

"Sam," he said, "I've got some bad news for you. I hope you can hold up under the shock. You've been re-elected speaker."

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Jeeps which have been delivered to Mexico from the United States have earned the nickname "las cucarachas" (the cockroaches).

Undersecretary of War Patterson is so busy he has to send a messenger out to buy his shoe laces.

Under current military rule in Hawaii, the army takes about $1,500 monthly from the civilian government's budget and uses it for propaganda and publicity to keep itself in power.

Soldiers and marines on Guadalcanal may not be aware of it, but one thing they are fighting for is rubber. As soon as our position in the Solomons is stabilized it will be possible to start gathering wild rubber. The amounts will be small, but a symbol of what we can get when we begin the reconquest of the great network of Pacific islands.

Production Now Is Farmers' Weapon

Survey Shows Good Crop Lands Limited

Generals know that this war can't be won just by relying on luck. Victory will be achieved by careful strategy and relentless action.

Neither can farmers win their share of the war on a gamble. Production is their weapon. Production must be planned for victory. Farm strategy is based on balancing output so as to turn out the right things at the right time through efficient use of American farm resources.

Many believe America has plenty of good farm land. But surveys show that good crop lands are sharply limited. Of the present area of 530 million acres available for crops, only 340 million acres can be classed as really good land. The rest is too steep, too rough, too shallow or too infertile for profitable cultivation.

Labor, machinery and materials are short now, too. These conditions make it imperative for wartime agriculture to adjust itself to producing needed crops with maximum efficiency.

U. S. farmers can't afford to grow large quantities of crops not vitally needed. With present acreage and the large carry-over in storage, there is an abundance of wheat, for instance. Boosting the wheat output now would not be a contribution to the nation's war effort. Consequently production goals for wheat called for a 12 per cent decrease in acreage. Land thus released from wheat can be used for food and fiber more urgently needed.

Dairy products, especially milk being hydrated for shipment all over the world, is figuratively "pouring" from millions of U. S. farms.

More milk products, eggs, and meats are vitally necessary for war needs now. The goal for milk is an 8 per cent increase.

Reports from farmers indicate they will probably meet the production goals based on anticipated needs of the United States and the United Nations. Some plantings may fall below goal levels, as in the case of peanuts and flaxseed for oils. But this is partially offset by soybean plantings in excess of goals.

This adjustment to wartime needs is being accomplished through acreage allotments, marketing quotas, farm program payments, commodity loans, and farm price supports provided by the department of agriculture.

After the war, the farm program machinery must be geared to the post-war problems of agriculture to protect farmers from the gigantic surpluses, depressed prices, and wholesale bankruptcies which followed the First World War.

Through adjustment, farmers will marshal their forces for abundance in peace as they are doing now for victory.

Treatment for Grubs

Cattle infested with grubs (sometimes called "warbles" or "wolves") should be treated in the following way: Mix a powder containing one part of 5 per cent rotenone content derris or cube powder and two parts of wettable sulphur. The powder should be applied to the back of the infested animal with a shaker and rubbed in lightly with the hand. Other methods of control are a derris or cube wash, or the use of a power sprayer in distributing a rotenone-sulphur mixture over the backs of the animals.

Keep Brood Sows Gaining

Brood sows should be kept gaining at the rate of about one pound per day up to farrowing time. Difficulty in farrowing, pig eating, and poor milk flow are often traceable to inadequate rations. A good ration includes a pound of oats per sow daily, a small amount of protein supplement such as tankage or soybean meal, free access to legume hay and enough corn to put on the desired gain.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The first known rubber hose was manufactured in England in 1827.

Collapse rubber boots equipped with paddles, ball-hole plugs, sea anchors, water, etc., are being produced for fighting U. S. airmen. Inflated in 10 seconds, this boot forms part of the pilot's seat and stays with him when he hits the water.

An Omaha, Neb., tire salesman hauled into court before rationing for parking his car near a hydrant first talked himself out of the $2 fine, then sold two new tires to the judge, two to the cop who arrested him and two to the court attendant.

Production of War tires is definitely tied to the production of reclaimed rubber. It is estimated that the country has refining capacity to process 360,000 tons of reclaimed a year.

Rubber authorities estimate that 900 million tires have been scrapped since World War I.

MURDER at PIRATES' HEAD

By ISABEL WAITT W-N-U RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Judy Jason, who is telling the story, receives an anonymous letter enclosing $800 and asking her to bid for an abandoned church to be auctioned the next day. She suspects, in turn, each of the guests at the inn where she is staying. They are the Reverend Jonas DeWitt, Lily Kendall, Thaddeus Quincy, Albion Potter, Hugh Norcross and his sister, Bessie, and Victor Quade, a writer who has just arrived. Judy bids for the church and gets it. After the auction the body of a man identified as Roddy Lane is found in a chest in the basement of the church. Hearing Aunt Nella cry for help the guests have gone to the rescue. Now continue with Judy's story.

CHAPTER IV

"Here, he's dead!" came a muffled wail from the vicinity of the old fish-shed. The light Mr. Quincy and I had seen earlier had vanished, but we followed the sound.

Soon we found Aunt Nella tugging at the inert form of her husband, who was lying prone on a bench near the door of the shed.

"Not dead—dead drunk, Mrs. Gerry," Hugh said. "He'll be all right." "Give us a hand," Mr. Quade said.

"You old fool," said Aunt Nella, chattering. "Not you, mister. I mean Wylie."

"S' queer the old codger who lives in this shed hasn't poked his head out—what with all the noise," Lily Kendall commented.

"Deaf as a haddock," someone said.

"Why bother the old man?" Hugh called over his shoulder. "Asleep, probably. Anyway, he'll keep till morning."

"I imagine the police will question him then," Mr. Quade said. "Unless—aren't there any boats here at the Head?"

"I can answer that," Lily said. "Wanted to go rowing over in the cove one day, and they said there wasn't a boat in the place."

"Lanes used to have boats," Aunt Nella volunteered. "Our boat—the Eleanor—leaks."

Back into the living room we all trooped.

"Is everybody at the inn here?" Victor Quade asked me.

I looked around and saw Mr. De Witt, Hugh Norcross, Albion Potter, Mr. Quincy and Lily Kendall. "All but Miss Bessie Norcross, asleep upstairs, and my aunt and uncle," Mr. Quade and Thaddeus Quincy held a consultation. Then Mr. Quincy thumped for silence and leaned back in his chair with an eager, pleased look on his withered face. I could vow he was enjoying himself.

"Mr. Quincy and I think a committee should be chosen to go down to the old church where Miss Jason made her—her terrifying discovery a while ago to verify it. Not that we doubt you, Miss Jason," Victor Quade expatiated. "But, after all, you did enter that basement alone and saw what you think you saw by two flaring matches. You might have been mistaken. You did not touch that—"

"No—no! But—it stuck out—all—stiff."

He looked at me queerly. "If you're right, that would mean rigor mortis—long enough for it and not too long afterward."

"You appear to know plenty about such things," Hugh said.

"If one is planning to write mysteries—"

Mr. Quincy broke in, "Wasn't you running through the Lane estate right after dark, was it, Norcross? Judy and I called to you?"

I held my breath. Hugh changed color. He looked as if he'd been caught stealing lump sugar.

"May have been. What of it? I went to my sister's room and—well, she was gone. Thought she might have strolled over toward the sea and ran after her, but just then her light came on and I ran home again. Any harm in that?" He turned to me, "If I'd heard you speak I'd certainly have answered."

Victor Quade whispered in my ear, "Could you make a note of that?" Aloud, he said, "Such questions are for the police, provided Miss Jason's right. The first thing isn't mutual recrimination, as I see it, but a trip to the church."

Mr. Quincy's cane thumped, "I appoint Mr. Quade, Mr. Potter and the Reverend De Witt. Keep close together and come straight back. We'll wait here. Judy, got a flashlight?"

I made Albion Potter come with me while I found Uncle Wylie's, out on the shelf in the back pantry.

"This kind of business makes me sick to my stomach," Potter said, pop-eyed. "Could we have something hot when we get back—coffee or cocoa?"

"Sure. I'll make it for you," Lily Kendall stood in the kitchen door. "Mr. Quincy says he wants his malted milk."

He could just wait. I went back with the flashlight and gave it to Victor Quade. Then Lily and I returned to the kitchen and put the kettle on. I let her slice a fresh loaf of bread and then wished I hadn't, she cut such chunks of slices.

We made coffee and malted milk for Mr. Quincy, and I sent up a cup to Aunt Nella.

We went back to the living room to wait for the committee and talked in lowered voices.

A short laugh reached us from outside. Voices, cheery. The men were coming back at last. Before they reached the steps we could hear Mr. De Witt's admonishing boom: "—mustn't be too hard on her—giddy young woman—imagination."

Thaddeus Quincy's eyes sought mine, questioningly. Then his mouth quirked and he muttered a single word.

Now the committee came into the room. Jonas De Witt beamed at us as he spread his hands. "False alarm, dear friends. The young lady's imagination got the better of her."

Albion Potter nodded in agreement. "There certainly wasn't a hand sticking out of the sea chest. Or—anything in it. Mr. Quade looked. It was quite empty."

"That's right. Miss Jason, in that dark basement at night it's no wonder your imagination played you tricks. If you saw anything it's not there now."

There they all sat in a circle, staring at me as if I were nuts. I stood up and said tartly, "All right, I'm glad I'm wrong. I had a day-nightmare, I suppose. Only remember this: Roddy came to the Head to coffee." Thaddeus Quincy handed me his empty malted milk glass and began to wheel himself across to his room. "Good night, all. Sweet dreams."

One by one the party followed suit, going to their respective rooms. The inn wasn't large, having been originally, as I've said, a private house. Upstairs we had only five bedrooms, with two and a cubicle on the third floor. This is how we bedded our guests:

Mr. Quincy had the front room opposite the parlor on the first floor, as a special concession, as before related. Above him was the Rev. Jonas DeWitt. Across, in the other front bedroom, slept Lily Kendall. Bessie Norcross's room came directly behind hers, and then Hugh's, a tiny one, even smaller than Albion Potter's self-styled studio at the rear.

Aunt Nella and Uncle Wylie occupied the room on the third floor directly above the Rev. Jonas DeWitt's. My nook, next them, had two windows, sawed-off and rattly, but I could see the ocean from one and the long, curving Neck toward town from the other. Across the tiny hall was a storeroom full of oddments to delight antique collectors, the Salvation Army and the junk man. It seemed as if Auntie never threw away a thing. She hadn't used a butter churn for years, but there was one in the attic beside an old bustle, neatly wrapped in newspapers and marked—"Aunt Code's bustle." I'd never even heard of Aunt Code.

Hugh Norcross had put up a tent on the lawn, where he sometimes slept on warm nights. With the inn on one side and the castle on the other and woods at the rear, it faced virtually the whole Head—a gorgeous spot which he himself had selected. I wondered if he'd sleep out tonight. He and his sister were apparently having an argument about it in the hall. "Nothing to be afraid of," I heard Hugh explode. But he went along upstairs just the same, the poor, henpecked brother.

Victor Quade waited till they were all out of hearing. "With your permission I'll sleep here on the davenport tonight. I know you haven't an extra room, but a blanket, perhaps?"

He couldn't be afraid! "Of course," I said. "You don't mean you're beginning to believe I didn't imagine things."

"Go to bed and forget it. No use worrying over—"

"But I'm not worrying. Are you? And—and do you always carry stacks of $20 bills?"

He looked at me puzzled, then his forehead unpuckered. "Oh, you want me to pay in advance. Is that it?"

"Certainly not. I'll get a blanket." If he'd sent me the auction letter he was a good actor. I came back with the blanket, and he followed me around while I locked up. There were only the back and front doors.

Perhaps I should have described the inn before. A narrow hallway ran down the center of the lower floor, with the parlor (so ugly!), dining room and kitchen off the left, as you enter Mr. Quincy's room, my office and a string of downstairs lavatories off the right. At the end of the kitchen was a built-in woodshed. The old barn across the drive served as a garage, workshop and storage for the Eleanor. That's all there was to us. The castle, with its stables, boathouse and garage, all in one, and the eyesore of the Smedley fish shed, were the remainder of the Head. Except, of course, Mr. Quade's trailer. A narrow beach skirted the bluff from the church to our woods below the barn, though you couldn't see it.

"I hope you'll be comfortable," I said to Mr. Quade.

"I hope you won't be nervous."

"Nervous? Well, wouldn't you be if you felt sure something pretty terrible was going on and no one believed you?"

"I believe you, Miss Jason," he said, quietly. "But there's nothing to be done tonight. That's why—I let it slide about your seeing things. Would you feel too badly about this Roddy Lane?"

I shrugged. "Not from what I've heard. Broken too many hearts. But why the change of face?"

"You'd be scared to death. You'd lie awake all night and worry."

"Behaved terribly so far, haven't I? You tell me this instant or—I'll scream."

Victor laughed. "It's just this. There's a car in the Lane garage. I peeked in the window with the flash. Green it was. That his?"

"Lord, yes. And if he'd left the Head he'd have gone in it."

"Exactly. Having no boat. Came in it, didn't he?"

I nodded and put a pillowcase over the softest sofa cushion. "Do the others know? Potter and Mr. De Witt?"

"Sure they know. They must have seen it, too. But there's something else they don't know."

We were almost whispering. I finished making up the best bed I could on that slippery old davenport and sat down, wide-eyed.

"Who at this house plays golf?" Victor demanded.

"Good idea. Ought to sleep well after our little excitement and the attend the auction and wasn't there. He engaged breakfast here and didn't show up. There's been no light at the castle. He did wear a square-cut diamond like the one I imagined I saw on a hand sticking out of the sea chest. And the bridge was blown up!"

Had they forgotten that in the larger issue? I could see Victor Quade's eyes twinkle.

"Maybe I imagined that, too," I had to say it. "Maybe it wasn't blown up at all. It just collapsed when one of your cars backfired, accounting neatly for the noise and everything. That's just dandy. Now none of you will have any reason for leaving Auntie in the lurch. Shall I get the coffee?"

"Please do," Victor Quade said, looking hard at me.

"Been a killer round that church I'd a-seen him," Lily said, piling sandwiches on a tray. "I was watching the sunquat, remember. I remembered there wasn't any sunset—just a miserable panorama of clouds and gathering fog from the sea. The sun had died at super-time, but I didn't say anything."

When I brought in the coffee, Albion Potter was explaining to Mr. Quincy that the committee had gone from the church to the castle, and failing to rouse anyone there, had tried the fish shed. Both were locked and silent. That's what had taken them so long. They'd wanted to be sure the person Judy thought she saw wasn't hiding somewhere else—ill, maybe, or wounded.

"Perhaps he's in your trailer, Mr. Quade," I said shortly.

Lily giggled. "Yeah, how chummy! There ain't no other place he could be less it's in the Pirate's Mouth."

Victor Quade looked blank. When he learned about that slit in the cliff he wanted to go down right away. But the rest of us forestalled him. Almost inaccessible in bright daylight, it would be suicide at night. One had to be very careful of those tricky footholds. A slip, and blooey—down into the foamy depths! Morning would be time enough.

"Who's imagining now?" I accused him.

Lily yawned. "Shucks!" she said. "Tomorrow the Rockville street department will fix the bridge. There won't be any publicity to amount to beans. No murder, no pictures on the front page. Me, I'm going to bed."

Service Men's News

Dec. 18th, 1942

Dear Friends:
Your gift box arrived here the other day and was certainly appreciated, many thanks for the Christmas cheer.

I'm glad to see you folks at home doing what you can. It's interesting to watch the boys get these boxes from home. They're very casual about it but you can see they are as pleased as a kid with a new toy. As I know so few of you, your gift came as a pleasant surprise. I hope to know you better in the future.

Here's hoping that before another Christmas rolls around this business will be over with and we all can spend it together.

Thank you again and "A Merry Christmas to you all."

R. W. McKelvey, Ensign USNR, USNAS, Ugham, Canal Zone.

Dec. 21, 1942

Dear Friends:
I received your package today. It was my first Christmas gift and one I was thrilled to receive. Until these last few days the Spirit of Christmas seemed to be missing. There was no chance of leave no opportunity of being home. Consequently Christmas threatened to be another day. But now as the Christmas cards, the gifts and all those items which add up to the sum of Christmas are coming in, this December 25 will be as unique as all its predecessors. I promise you. As much as we would like to be home, we'll manage to spend some kind of an enjoyable day.

Thanks loads for the gift. May God Bless you on His day, December 25 for the splendid work you have done, I wish you a happy and a Holy Christmas.

M. J. Esposito, QM 3-cl USN, York U.S.S. L. S. T. 385, New York, NY.

Dec. 27, 1942

Dear Friends:
Arrived back at Camp Pickett a week ago, after spending an enjoyable 10 days at home. The whole trouble is the time went too quickly but then all good things have a way of coming to an end in a hurry.

Instead of having a "White Christmas" here at Camp we had a wet one. It rained on Christmas day, and has rained every day since.

I want to take this opportunity to thank everyone who sent Christmas greetings to me this Season. Also want to thank you all for the Christmas package I received from the Citizens Service Committee. Needless to say, it was very much appreciated by myself and the rest of the boys.

Hoping you have a Happy Holiday season, I remain,

Your Friend,

Dear Friends:

I received your most welcome Christmas package and wish to thank you all for it. It sure was swell.

I have been transferred into the Air Corps but will continue doing the same work as before. Our quarters here are really swell. Seems almost too good to be true to be living in a hotel.

Well thanks again for everything and wishing you all a Happy New Year.

Dear Friends:

Thank you very much for the fine kit you gave me. I am one of the first 200 fellows to go to school here. We do not have beds yet, but expect them soon. We do however, have mattresses and blankets, which are sufficient for now. So long for now and thanks again.

Thanks for the kit. It sure comes in handy. Haven't much to write about as we haven't had anything but drilling so far.

Yours truly,

Dear Friends:

In this message I wish to thank you all for the fine Christmas gift and this was indeed a wonderful surprise. One doesn't realize how barren the seasonal holidays can be when expressions of well wishing don't exist. Thank you all again

Dear Friends:

Just a few lines to say hello and to thank you for the cigarettes, candy and razor blades that I received from you yesterday. I sure will enjoy them a lot.

I guess it is pretty cold there now, it sure is here. I think we will have a white Xmas. Sure wish I could be home, but the way things are I can't, but I hope to be there for the next one. I hope so, at least and I guess there are a lot more just like me. There will be quite a few fellows leaving since they started taking 18 and 19 year-olds. Well there isn't a thing to write about so guess I will have to close. So you tell all my friends that I am fine and say hello, will you?

Thanks a lot for everything,
As ever, just

American Legion Auxiliary:
Ladies:

I wish to take this opportunity to thank you for the Christmas package I received from you last night (Dec. 25). I appreciate your thoughtfulness very much. It means a lot in the service to be remembered by the folks back home.

It's raining here and very warm, doesn't look like the Christmas that I have been accustomed to. Altho we have a tree in our mess hall and will have a program in the chapel this evening.

Wishing you all a Very Merry Christmas, I remain as ever, your truly,

Guy Gorman.

Hondo, Texas
Dec. 26, 1942.
Dear Mrs. Kruspe:

Now that the Xmas rush is over, it's time I thank you for the thoughtful package. It is quite a help to know there are friends back home who give a thought to us even if we are miles away. Course the candy disappeared like magic, we have a habit of sharing with our bunks. It works swell in the long run, as we are always eating cookies and candy from home. Our Christmas dinner reminded me of a $5 meal at the best place in Chicago. We surely ate like Kings. Guess I can feel lucky when I compare the weather here with the cold winter back home. It's most like spring, with showers and cool breezes every night.

After looking at the list of Orland boys in service, I'm mighty proud to be from it. It's now "lights out" so I want to say "thank you" again and wish every member of the Legion Auxiliary and their families a Happy New Year.

Thankfully,

Mrs. Kruspe and Ladies:

Just a line to thank you for the package that you ladies so generously sent me. I appreciate your remembering very much, it was nice to receive a gift from a group from home. We had a very nice Xmas although it's nothing like being home. This is my second year away from home and it seems much longer.

This camp is just about ready to start its training of enlisted men, at least they have a full strength division now. We are kept quite busy especially so just before Xmas as my work is the handling of all official mail for the Post plus personal mail for three hundred-odd Officers. The camp post office still has two full box-cars of parcel post to unload so a lot of soldiers are going to receive late Xmas gifts. I see by the Orland Herald that they are starting to take the younger fellows already. It hardly seems possible that some of the kids will probably have to serve. I keep pretty well up on the movement of the men from home via the Orland Park Herald. Well I must get back to work now, so once again I thank you all.

Thank you again,
S-Sgt. Cyril Kay.

Mrs. Kruspe,

Chairman American Legion Aux.

I certainly wish to thank you and the Auxiliary for the lovely Xmas box. I realize I'm very late in thanking you for the wonderful gift, but believe me we've been shifted to night school and just don't seem to find time to write the letters we would really like to write.

It's people like you that make this Army the best in the world, without the support from home we wouldn't be able to enjoy army life the way we do.

In thanking you the Xmas box I wish to extend thanks from my room mate (Pvt. M. Madden, Falls Church, Va.) who enjoyed with me the lovely gift. I hope to finish school in three more weeks and then will move on again to some station for actual training.

In closing I wish to thank you

Wartime Medical Supplies and Electricity

To meet the wartime demand for vast quantities of medical supplies, electricity is on the job every hour of the day. It runs the machines that control temperature and humidity in pharmaceutical laboratories... the machines that extract medical ingredients... the machines that sterilize containers... the machines that automatically package medical preparations.

Electricity gives life to these and hundreds of other machines that speed the preparation of medical supplies for America's soldiers, sailors and marines.

This electrically operated machine sterilizes ampoules which will carry injection preparations to our Medical Corps.

After the ampoules are filled the heads are heated to a pliable state and carefully sealed to insure sterility.

Under electric light the ampoules are subjected to rigid inspection before being shipped to America's field hospitals.

Salvage of Wastepaper To Be Renewed

Community salvage leaders have been asked to renew their efforts in collecting newspapers, magazines, pasteboard boxes and all other forms of salvage paper. A bulletin recently issued by the Illinois State Council of Defense explained that several months ago there were large stock-piles of waste paper accumulated by Civilian Defense Organizations who found it difficult to sell their accumulations. The reason for this was that the salvage committees did such an excellent job of collecting paper that the mills had more than they could use. At present the shortage of paper has become critical and as the expanded war program for 1943 is calling for greater quantities of pulp and waste paper than was anticipated it is important that the public be old of these necessities and be asked to cooperate in collecting as much paper as possible. The present price of mixed paper in bales is $10 a ton, old newspapers in bales or bundles is $15 a ton and corrugated paper is $16.50 a ton. Junk dealers who refuse to handle paper should be reported to authorities.

Housewives are again reminded to save tin cans as some arrangement will be made in the near future for their collection.

The demand for old silk stockings will continue for the duration. Mrs. Arthur Lambrecht, chairman for this collection announces that approximately 15 pounds of old silk and nylon hose have been deposited in boxes provided for this purpose in local stores. They will be taken to a large department store where they are packed into 100-pound lots and shipped to the Defense Supplies Corporation at Green Island, N. Y.

Mrs. Herbert Folkers, chairman of kitchen fats salvage has received a bulletin from the regional WPB conservation director stating that Illinois is leading the nation in the salvage of fats and grease. The midwest region led the country during the period ending Nov. 1 with a total of 2,140,436 pounds, or 34 per cent of the quota. If every housewife in the country would save as little as 4 ounces of fats in a week, it could produce the glycerine required to make 13 million pounds of gun powder.

Members of the Victory club will call for all salvage material. willb?W- cmfwyp shrdlu etaoinunnu

The Wednesday Afternoon Club held their first meeting of 1943 last week at the home of Mrs. Handorf on Bell Road. The next meeting is scheduled for the home of Mrs. Hazel Moore.

Chief Petty Officer Ira Cowan is now stationed somewhere in the British Isles. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cowan hear from him quite often and say his letters are very cheerful and that he is well, happy and never misses a meal. The food is very excellent and well prepared, but he tells his mother that he will be home for next Christmas dinner and to have a well browned turkey all ready. He says the only thing he can't get used to is driving on the left hand side of the road as they do there. He hopes to see you a lot earlier than Christmas Ira, and take care of yourself and come home safely. Other boys in service heard from recently are Bob Carson of the Marines who is on the high seas, Art Kotrba in Norfolk, Va. with the 71st Battalion of the US Naval Construction Training Center, Lt. Paul DeRoulet is in New Boston, Texas and his family is preparing to follow him there where he is in the Commissary Dept. Kenneth L. Bergstrom had a date Jan. 23 with the Navy. He reported to the Engineering Dept of the US Navy at Bronx, New York. Our sincerest wishes go to all these home boys.

The Girl Scouts held their regular meeting Monday afternoon in the Village Hall. The Girls are still collecting books and old, discarded silk stockings for the USO. Books should be in good condition and of the type that the boys like to read in their spare moments. Anyone wishing to make contributions to the club call Shirley Treadway, Palos 767M1 and they will make arrangements to call for them. Defense stamp corsages are still being sold and can be purchased from old, Scout. 85 have been sold to date and all good Americans are wearing them.

All schools were closed Tuesday and Wednesday due to the terribly cold weather. The men who run the snow plow could help the Rural mail man greatly by not piling the snow in front of mail boxes. It makes it awfully hard to get up to the box to put the mail in and it takes just a minute to run the plow closer and pile the snow in the ditch. All rural carriers will thank you.

The Palos Juniors held a bobsled party Friday night after the ride and a two mile hike they finished up at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Heide and refreshments were served in their basement by Mrs. Irving Pronger sponsor of the Girls. The Girls were very pleased Saturday when they were chosen by a photographer of the Chicago Daily Times to have their picture taken in the sleigh and published in the Sunday edition. Pvt. Robert DeNova was home on a furlough from an Air School in Texas and joined the girls in this feat. The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Rose Mary Lucas.

Mr. and Mrs. Art Leibinger of Chicago were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Powell and family.

Mr. and Mrs. George B. McKibben and family of Chicago visited their summer home in Palos Sunday. Mr. McKibben has held the office of Finance Director in Gov. Dwight H. Green's cabinet and has resigned from that post to throw his hat in the race for Mayor of Chicago in the next election. Upon his resignation as finance director Mr. McKibben made the following press statement: "I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Mayor of Chicago. There is only one issue in this campaign and that is Mayor Kelly and his city hall machine. Four years ago I had the privilege of standing behind Gov. Green when he carried on his fight against the city hall. Mayor Kelly has announced his candidacy for reelection. This is the same fight that was begun four years ago. I ask the support in the February primary, of all those in the Republican party who wish to see a successful vigorous fight waged against the city hall machine. When the primary is past I shall ask the support in the April election of all the splendid men and women of Chicago. Republicans and Democrats alike, who are willing to unite to free their city from the corrupt and wasteful government it now has, and to give it a chance to take its rightful place among the foremost cities of the nation. In order that I may devote my entire time and effort to the winning of this nomination and the subsequent election, I have sent Gov. Green my resignation as director of finance." The McKibben family have not been able to spend as much time in Palos as they would like to do to his earnest work between Springfield and Chicago.

In spite of the sub-zero weather, the PTA meeting at the Doctor School District 137 was largely attended. Mrs. Harold Henke spoke interestingly on China and her talk was much enjoyed by her audience. Her talk was amplified by some excellent and unusual films which had been personally taken by Mrs. Henke and her husband, Dr. Henke during their long residence in China. Refreshments were served by members of the PTA.

Mrs. Ralph Jorgensen entertained a few friends at her home Tuesday afternoon in honor of her sister Shirley's birthday.

Owen Creer received a card from his aunt, Mrs. Lillie Cooper who is visiting her daughter Mrs. Helen Basset in Ontario, Wisconsin. Mrs. Basset has a brand new baby and grandma Cooper says baby is doing fine. Reports that she is enjoying the cold weather, only 36 below. The card is rather unique in form as Mrs. Cooper cut the bark from a birch tree, dried and pressed it to a postal card size.

Sunday, Jan. 25th Mrs. Elsie Yunker and sons of Raney's Lane, entertained a group of relatives and friends. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Bowman of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Buettner of Chicago and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baker of Orland Park. Dinner was served and a social evening followed.

George Merrill Cooper has been made a Sergeant of the Signal corps at Orlando, Florida.

The bakery sale held at Loebe's store last Saturday afternoon under the auspices of the Orland Park Woman's Club for the benefit of the library fund was a decided success. Mrs. Stewart Loebe, president and the committee wish to extend their thanks to all who helped make the affair a success.

The many friends of Mrs. Jean Lindquist were grieved to learn of the death of her brother, who died suddenly in Chicago last Friday evening.

The Red Cross Sewing Class met in the home of Mrs. John Loebe Wednesday Jan. 20th. There were 16 ladies present and a great deal of work was accomplished. Mrs. John Loebe, Mrs. David Agate, Mrs. Ella Loebe and Mrs. Harriett Gee served as the hostess committee. The next class will be held at the home of Mrs. Stewart Loebe, Feb. 17th.

The

DISCUSSIONS lately have been flowing with the length and turbulence of Midwestern rivers concerning the names of all-around stars.

In these arguments, many of them started in army camps, we have had such names as Jim Thorpe, Bronko Nagurski, Sammy Baugh and many others.

As a composite star, we have just heard from an old friend we'd like to enter in this competition.

Grantland Rice

In any mass formation of prominent celebrities his name might be swept aside. Here are his qualifications — a 168-pound plunging, hard-hitting full-back at Vanderbilt around 1908—high-class college boxer—professor of English at Amherst—author of five volumes of extremely high-class verse, largely sonnets—now, in addition to his English teaching, in charge of boxing at Amherst along the lines of war training.

His name is David Morton, one of Dan McGugin's favorite football players and one of Amherst's best-liked professors.

Dave Morton couldn't hit the line with Thorpe or Nagurski, or pass like Baugh. But he was still 168 pounds of crash and smash.

But neither of these men could box with him—and neither could write his sonnets from "Harvest," "Ships in Harbour" and other published works.

And I have an idea none of these could teach English at Amherst with quite the same effectiveness.

Strong for Boxing

Here is a letter from Dave Morton that explains itself—

"I welcomed your emphasis on boxing for soldier training in a recent column. (I'm running the boxing at Amherst.) All you say about parry and thrust and feinting is true. Plus two other things. Keeping on balance—set for offense or defense—every second under all conditions.

"Discovery (for beginners) of the surprising margin of endurance and vigorous action after being hurt. The uninitiated don't know they have it. They learn this from boxing.

"These two things go into the list of wartime dividends from boxing experience.

"At Amherst boxing is compulsory now for every student. I have 150 a week, taking instruction and mauling one another around. They like it, for the most part, and all of them want what it gives—conditioning, co-ordination, skill in offense and defense, capacity for absorbing punishment.

"Don't let anyone tell you the college student is soft. I take eight or ten hours a week (and other things around the jaw and body) learning that that is an exploded myth. He's willing—and he's determined to learn how to give and take, and to be skillful as well."

Boxing's Worth

When over 60-year-old Tony Bidle is willing to meet a bayonet fighter with bare hands—when Tommy Loughran takes the bayoneteers on with boxing gloves, you get the main idea.

There is still another idea that can be added to this list, brought out by another old friend known as Jack Dempsey.

Lieutenant Dempsey could never hit a line, throw a pass or even take time to read a sonnet, much less compose one.

But the Old Manassa Mauler had another good reason for boxing's worth.

"The big help," Jack says, "is the confidence it brings to these fellows. They seem to think they are dubs at the start. And most of them are—don't know a right hand from a left hand. But after two weeks, when they find they can take a punch and can throw a few, they are different guys. They look you in the eye in a different way. I've seen some of these boys hurt from a punch, and I made them stop for a rest. They don't like to be stopped. They want to prove they can get hurt and still keep swinging. And I'm now talking about clumsy-looking starters who couldn't even chin themselves twice when they came to camp."

Jack Dempsey

Untapped Mines

This country is full of possible stars and potential athletes who have never had a chance to prove their place in the shining sun of competition.

There has been entirely too much concentration on the few who, as football players, fighters or baseball players, could attract crowds at the gate.

Some stars had more color than others—although they may not have been better athletes. The build-up always has been important.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

THE unofficial ruling of Paul V. McNutt, War Manpower commissioner, that baseball (and all sports generally) is "unessential" came as no great surprise to baseball leaders. Few of them ever had the idea that baseball was essential.

McNutt did not speak for direct quotation. He designated sports as unessential in reply to a series of questions put to him several weeks ago by a baseball reporter.

Leaders of the sport expected no favors. They realized that many of their players would be frozen in war industries and the War Manpower commission indicated they were right. However, McNutt uttered no specific statement of policy covering the freezing of ball players or other professional athletes. It is doubtful if any such statement will be made in the near future. Each draft board will be given the authority to act in accordance with the local situation.

The United Press quoted McNutt as saying:

"The usefulness of the sport is a separate question from the essentiality of the individuals who play it. Thus it may well be that it is desirable that Blankville have a ball team but Blankville may lose certain members of the team to higher priority industries—even members who might be 'essential' to winning the pennant. The pennant is not essential."

The Crystal Ball

There is no good reason why McNutt, Draft Director Hershey or any other government official should attempt to chart a fixed, almost inflexible, course for baseball players or any other professional athletes. Of course they want their status clarified. They want to know if they are to be permitted to play baseball, football, etc., or if they are to be drafted into war industry or the armed services. They want to know what the future has in store for them.

But every other man in civilian life wants to know the same thing. He wants to know what his future is during wartime. The average physically fit white collar worker knows that his job doesn't offer the same degree of security that it did five years ago. He understands that the government can't tell him exactly how, when and where he fits into the over-all picture. The changing course of events, which cannot always be foreseen by the government, may alter any man's status.

A great majority of baseball leaders recognize this fact. They hope, certainly, that baseball will continue for the duration, but are more than willing to make their share of sacrifices for the good of their country.

The Lion-Hearted

When Gus Dorais severed an 18-year athletic association with the University of Detroit, the Detroit Lions acquired the services of a man who is bound to become an important figure in the National Football league.

Dorais, who left with the blessing of the university to become head coach, general manager and part owner of the Lions, said, among other things that "I am enthusiastic about the future of major league football and will bend every effort to see that the Detroit Lions take their rightful place in the football world."

Fred L. Mandel Jr., who bought the Lions for $225,000 in 1940, said that he was certain the move was "the greatest thing in the history of the team." It is estimated that Mandel, wealthy Chicago department store magnate, has spent an additional $175,000 on the team since purchasing it. He wants a strong professional football team and is willing to spend money to get it.

Dorais is a good coach. But he has a heart-breaking job ahead of him. The next couple of years likely will make his career as a collegiate coach appear as a bed of roses in contrast. His three-way job with the Lions isn't conducive to placidity.

Background

It was back in 1913 that Dorais gained his first football fame. He was pitching forward passes to Knute Rockne at Notre Dame. Since then he has been backfield coach at Notre Dame and head coach at Columbia college (Iowa), Gonzaga university and the U. of D. He stayed at Detroit from 1924 through the 1942 season.

During his stay at Detroit, Dorais' teams won 113 games, tied seven and lost 50 for a .693 percentage. In 1928 his team went undefeated, winning nine straight games.

One thing is fairly certain. Dorais has accepted an overwhelming share of the responsibility for the club's future. His appointment marks the first time in history that a National league club has appointed an athletic director.

Dorais will choose his own assistants, do his own scouting, make up the team's schedule, have charge of all equipment, arrange for trips and select the players.

Our money—for the long haul—is on Dorais. He won't win the championship in 1943, but he will build surely and speedily for the future.

WALTER WINCHELL is on a tour of duty outside Continental U. S. During his absence, contributors will substitute.

WE SHOULD KNOW ABOUT THE JAPS

By James R. Young
Who Was 13 Years in Tokyo for INS.

MAYLING SOONG FOUNDATION, honoring the First Lady of China, established by her many friends in this country, has been given further impetus by Wellesley College alumnae on her arrival here 25 years after her graduation.

TWO JAPS, former students in the United States, are reported handling the 12,000 man Jap invasion army units in Northern Japan. These men would specialize in a follow up, after combat troops, in commandeering radio stations, telephone switchboards, gasoline stations, highways, railways, bus lines and power houses. One is Lieut. Henry Shimomouchi, a former San Francisco resident, and as of Dec. 7, 1941, in charge of Japan's so-called cultural society in Rockefeller Center. The other, Capt. Frank Matsumoto, was athletic director of Waseda University in Tokyo who entertained visiting American college and professional athletic teams.

A BICYCLE, the chief means of transportation in Shanghai, now costs $10,000 in Chinese currency. The Japs, pre-Pearl Harbor, were the world's largest bike manufacturers, making them from processed American scrap at $3 apiece and selling them on a one year installment plan to the natives of Indo-China, Siam and Malaya. In the drive on Singapore, Bangkok and Rangoon, the Japs seized the bicycles and literally peddled their way through the peninsula. Tokyo has an estimated 2,200,000 bicycles. Few have coaster brakes, which are the costliest part. The ingenious Jap manufacturers decided to leave off the expensive part—if you want to stop, fall off.

THIS WINTER Shanghai will witness hundreds of deaths from freezing and insufficient food. The European refugee colony, numbering several thousands, will suffer, too. The Japs, last Winter, seized all wheat and rice, and sealed Red Cross supplies—not one ounce or a single bottle of medicine was permitted in use. The Japs prefer to have thousands die in Shanghai's below zero weather than survive and require to be fed.

CHILEANS are being told by the Jap ambassador down there that if their country breaks with the Axis, Japan will bomb the long shore line. Japan for years was one of Chile's great nitrate buyers. In return the Chileans obtained Jap cotton piece goods, pottery, rayon, uniforms and military equipment. Boatloads of Chilean nitrate, sold by a British controlled company, went to Japan in return for munitions and agriculture. Now we must use nitrate on the Japs in the Pacific. Just as our oil and gasoline have taken the Japs to the Solomons and the Aleutians. Or, as Dr. Lin Yutang explains the paradox, we sold the Japs the Ninth Avenue Elevated so they could make bullets. Now we have torn down the Second Avenue Elevated to make bullets to fire back at the Ninth Avenue train.

HOUSE FOREIGN AFFAIRS committee should include besides Clare Boothe Luce, a famous medical missionary from China, Dr. Walter H. Judd, elected from Minneapolis. He was one of many warning us years ahead of Japan's method of attacks. Possibly the Luce-Judd combination might shake down some of the mentally stagnated members of the State Department. And here's a tip: These Chinese are indignant that we have not cleaned house in the Far Eastern division of Mr. Hull's department, a year after war started. We'd better clean those career barnacles from the ship of state, if we expect future cooperation from the Chinese.

RAY KINNEY, the coast to coast Hawaiian bandman who recently played to a $22,000 house in Chicago, knows Hawaiian legislative work. He worked as a page boy in the Territorial halls. His brother is an outstanding authority on Japs in Hawaii and published a book 20 years ago which was suppressed because it revealed Jap plots and intrigue in illegal immigration work.

SIR GEORGE SANSOM, one of the few British officials really familiar with Japan, has been appointed economic expert on Far Eastern affairs to the British Embassy in Washington. His counterpart in the American Embassy in Tokyo was Frank Starr Williams. Both Sir George and Frank Williams were outstanding authorities on Japan's plans for war—but few wanted to listen to them, especially the cotton people who were selling the Japs on credit and wanted Williams to help collect their bills!

Bird Playground

A unique habit among birds is the building of a bower or playground by the bowerbird of Australia, says Collier's. Unique also is the habit of decorating it with stolen articles, all of a certain color.

One such bower, evidently constructed by a bird that liked blue, contained, among many other blue articles, a blue hair ribbon, a blue railroad ticket, a string of blue glass beads and 178 blue bags, belonging to a near-by laundry.

Kill for Immortality

The belief that a person must die a violent death to obtain a future life still prevails among several tribes, notably the Batta of Sumatra and the Chukchi of Siberia, says Collier's. Thus, as an act of filial piety, a son kills his father and mother, when they become feeble and are ready to die, so they will achieve immortality.

'Genuine Fake'

For a decade after 1920, Alceo Dossena, an Italian sculptor, so cleverly imitated the works of old masters that, unknown to him, unscrupulous dealers sold many of them as genuine, says Collier's. After the expose, Dossena became famous and his imitations were eagerly sought.

At an auction of his work in New York in 1933, every purchaser requested and received a certificate from the Italian government guaranteeing each piece to be a "genuine fake."

Fun for the Whole Family

IN THE good old days when dress-makers were paid according to the number of spools of thread they used, the empty spools were saved until enough had been accumulated to make a corner what-not or hanging shelves. Now, with machines whirring for defense sewing, it is again easy to save enough spools for one of these quaint sets of shelves.

You will need 60 spools; 12 1/2 feet of wire just stiff enough to bend easily; and three boards of the size desired for the shelves. Either a stain or a paint finish may be used.

NOTE: These spool shelves are from Book 3 of the series of eight booklets which Mrs. Spears has prepared for our readers. There are directions for an end table of spools in Book 5 and a corner what-not in Book 7. Each of these booklets contains more than 30 other fascinating things to make for the home. City and Down-State Tax Collections: A Story of Contrasts

A tax expert who recently issued a statement on tax collections showed that during the last 13 years Cook county, largest in Illinois, collected only 79 per cent of the taxes assessed. This left 140 million dollars in delinquent real estate taxes and $262,784,988 in delinquent personal property taxes. The treasurer of Cook county reports that only 80.8 per cent of the 1940 levy has been collected.

Contrast this showing with the records made by most downstate counties in Illinois, and a revealing situation is disclosed.

In Putnam county, for example, smallest county in the state, more than 99 per cent of the personal and real estate taxes for 1940 have been collected. In DeKalb county, 99.045 per cent of all 1940 taxes have been paid. In Adams county, which contains the sizable city of Quincy, 98.64 per cent of the personal taxes and 98.7 per cent of the real estate taxes have been brought in. Macon county, where Decatur is situated, has a record of 96.7 per cent of 1940 taxes paid; Stephenson county, 98.53 per cent.

It is pointed out, in this connection, that the treasurers of the largest and smallest counties in the state, and of all the counties in between, operate under exactly the same state laws.

And to the question—"why such a difference between Cook county and the rest of the state?"—one of the answers is:

"Those primarily responsible for tax delinquency are not the officials charged with the collection of taxes, but the leaders of political machines. Taxes are not collected in Cook county because no one wants to incur . . . political unpopularity by collecting them."

Every local tax bill contains its proportion of local, school, county and state expenses. Evading taxes may be a profitable political game, but it destroys fairness and equality in bearing our tax burden. The present war emergency, say conscientious officials and private citizens alike, requires such honesty in tax assessment and vigilance in tax collecting that every taxpayer, however great his tax load, may have confidence that every other taxpayer is carrying his fair share.
